Post G20: Status Quo

On 7 and 8 July U.S. President Donald J. Trump will have attended the G20 summit in Hamburg – his first visit to the summit since being in office. Following this meeting of both industrialized and newly industrialized countries, it's time to analyze the current state of international affairs. (see page2)

The summit examines three key areas: building resilience, improving sustainability and assuming responsibility. What is President Trump and his Administration's stance on these issues? And what are the possible ramifications of the current administrations differentiating views with regards to existing treaties? Small reception with drinks and snacks will follow.
